

The status of this enable pin will decide the time for which the pump operates which essentially will be dependent on the output of the sensors. Thus by controlling the time we can control the quantity of water flowing .

